“

Management accounting makes relevant information available to decision-makers when they need it. Although it is important, data is only the start of the decision-making process.

Insights gleaned from information must be set against externalities such as prevailing business conditions, which can be affected by myriad factors and not all of which have data immediately available.

This is where management accountants, with their knowledge of operating and business models, can show both their own value and that of the profession. We use “integrated thinking” to join the dots and tell the story that supports good decision-making.

The CIMA Journey

The CIMA journey equips aspiring management accountants with rigorous education, practical experience, and ongoing development, culminating in the globally recognized CIMA qualification and CGMA designation.

EDUCATION

The journey begins with the CIMA Certificate in Business Accounting (Cert BA), which is an entry-level qualification that provides a solid foundation in business and finance principles. This is suitable for those new to business or accounting.

PROFESSIONAL QUALIFICATION

After completing the Cert BA, students progress to the CIMA Professional Qualification, which is divided into three levels: Operational, Management, and Strategic. Each level consists of three objective tests and one case study exam. These levels progressively deepen the student's knowledge and understanding of finance, business strategy, risk management, and decision-making:

- Operational Level: Focuses on short-term financial strategy and the implementation of financial policies.
- Management Level: Centers on medium-term financial decision-making and managing organizational performance.
- Strategic Level: Concentrates on long-term strategic decision-making and risk management.

PRACTICAL EXPERIENCE

To qualify for CIMA membership and the CGMA designation, students must also complete three years of verified relevant work experience, which allows them to apply what they've learned in a practical setting. This experience can be gained before, during, or after completing the exams.

MEMBERSHIP AND DESIGNATION

Upon completing the exams and meeting the practical experience requirements, students can apply to become CIMA members. Once membership is granted, they earn the prestigious CGMA designation conferred by The Chartered Institute of Management Accountants (CIMA).

CONTINUING PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT (CPD)

CIMA members must engage in CPD activities annually to maintain their knowledge and skills relevant to the services they provide. This ensures they remain competent as professional management accountants.

The CIMA journey is designed not just to educate but to develop competent, ethical, and skilled management accountants who can lead businesses effectively. It's a comprehensive pathway that prepares individuals for strategic decision-making roles in business and finance.

Eligibility

For aspiring management accountants aiming to pursue CIMA (Chartered Institute of Management Accountants) qualifications, there are several entry pathways based on educational and professional backgrounds:

DIRECT ENTRY FOR SCHOOL LEAVERS

Students who have completed their secondary education (such as 12th standard from recognized boards) can begin with the CIMA Certificate in Business Accounting (Cert BA). This foundational course requires no specific grades or subjects, making it accessible to all interested in a career in management accounting.

GRADUATES FROM ANY DISCIPLINE

Those with a bachelor's degree, regardless of the discipline, can directly enroll in the CIMA Professional Qualification. Entry points within the professional levels may vary based on the degree's relevance to finance and accounting, with possible exemptions for related academic backgrounds.

MBA AND MASTER'S DEGREE HOLDERS

Individuals with an MBA or a Master's in relevant fields such as finance or accounting may receive exemptions that allow them to bypass some of the CIMA exams, accelerating their certification process.

PROFESSIONALS WITH RELEVANT WORK EXPERIENCE

CIMA members must engage in CPD activities annually to maintain their knowledge and skills relevant to the services they provide. This ensures they remain competent as professional management accountants.

GATEWAY ROUTES

- Masters Gateway Route: This offers an accelerated entry through a gateway examination for those with an MBA or a relevant master's degree, leading directly into the strategic level of the CIMA Professional Qualification.
 - Management Accountant Gateway Route: Available for members or passed finalists of recognized professional bodies, this route provides a fast track into the CIMA exams.
